Breaking up is hard do

The breakup of a relationship is often a very difficult time for the adults (and any children) involved, as is an application for “Social Services” for a “care order” about children.

Your lawyers should guide you through the process and help you to make the decisions that will affect the rest of your life. That role requires experience and expertise. At Chivers Walsh Family Law, we have both.

The firm was established in 1991, to deal with legal issues affecting individuals. Since 2011, we have dealt exclusively with family law issues. All of the lawyers have at least 25 years’ experience. The directors who deal with cases where “Social Services” are applying for “care orders” about children are members of a specialist panel; The Law Society Children Law Accreditation Scheme. The other lawyers have spent their careers in family law.

Let us help take the strain

You will have a lot to think about and decide. If you have children, their interests will come first. You will need to make decisions about where it would be best for them to live and how “contact” will work.

Whether or not you have children, if your relationship has broken down, there are likely to be decisions about family finances that will need careful thought.

We will give you expert advice, based on our experience. Our advice will be supported by a range of over 30 information leaflets, copies of which we will provide you with as appropriate. You will then have the advice and information you need to make the crucial decisions in your situation.

Chivers Walsh Family Law is the trading name of CWFL Limited, which is registered in England & Wales under company registration number 11248746.

Our approach

All lawyers in the firm work within the Code of Practice of Resolution, a national organisation of specialist family lawyers committed to dealing with matters in a constructive fashion. We will avoid the use of inflammatory language and retain professional objectivity and respect for everyone involved. This approach will complement our dealing with the issues arising from the breakdown of your relationship in a manner that is measured and, most importantly, fair to you.
